For 35 years (1992), the NGO Objectif Sciences International has been developing a totally disruptive idea: enabling citizens of all ages to genuinely produce new scientific knowledge and contribute to projects that are useful to the world, while living a transformative experience.

Over the years, we have been able to give this concept a name: Participatory Science and Research for Impact, and a remarkable evolution has gradually taken place.

Today, associations, NGOs, agencies, tour operators, educational organizations, universities, laboratories, territories, residential centers, guides, scientific teams and local operators are appearing everywhere, capable of organizing very high-quality experiences themselves, with all the dimensions that this requires taking into account.

This is excellent news.

This now enables Objectif Sciences International to take a new step in its history: to focus increasingly on its role as an international Resource Platform, and to place its 35 years of experience, its methods, and its scientific, educational and institutional environment at the service of a much larger number of autonomous Organizers.

Do you already know how to organize a trip, a stay, an expedition, a discovery class, a field mission or a training program?

Do you have a destination, accommodation, a team, a territory, an audience, scientific expertise or simply a high-quality operational capacity?

Your next program could appear in the Scientific Expeditions catalog of the NGO Objectif Sciences International.
